ELABORATE MAY DAY DEMONSTRATIONS IN BERLIN AND MOSCOW

Mlle. Maryse Hilz.

MLLE. HILZ LEAVES TO-DAY FOR HANOI

Hops Off From Kai Tak At 10.45 A.M.

TOKYO TO PARIS FLIGHT

After hours of tedious waiting for good weather, Mlle. Maryse Hilz, the French aviatrix, took off from Kai Tak this morning at 10.45 o'clock. Conditions ahead are uncertain, but the intrepid flyer expressed her determination to reach Hanoi to-day.

Mlle. Hilz, who arrived in the Colony at 5.15 p.m. on Saturday, after a 10-hour non-stop flight from Shanghai, intended to make her departure from Kai Tak yesterday morning. She took off at 7.30 a.m. but the bad visibility forced her to return and she landed at the aerodrome again at 10.30 a.m.

The bad weather encountered since the commencement of her return trip from Tokyo has caused Mlle. Hilz to abandon her attempt to establish a new record for the Tokyo-Paris flight, and she now states that she will "take no chances."

SPEED PILOT IN COLONY

Major Doolittle To Visit Canton.

DEMONSTRATION FLIGHTS IN PURSUIT PLANES

Major J. H. Doolittle the famous American flier and one time winner of the Schneider Trophy arrived in the Colony on board the s.s. President Lincoln this afternoon, at 2.30.

He is only spending about 24 hours in Hong Kong as he is due to leave here to-morrow night for Canton, where he will make demonstration flights on a Curtiss Hawk, single seater pursuit plane.

This plane mounts the Wright Cyclone 700 h.p. engine which drives the plane at a speed of 216 m.p.h. at an altitude of 6,000 feet. Major Doolittle's mechanic, Mr. E. R. Bayless is now in Canton assembling the machine. The purpose of the demonstrations is to prove that the machine is capable of performing as specified. This plane is the first of about 20 machines which have been purchased by the Canton Government.

Major Doolittle is the manager of the aviation department of the Shell Petroleum Corporation at St. Louis, Mo. He is now on leave and has taken the opportunity to test machines for the Curtiss Company.

MAY DAY IN GERMANY AND RUSSIA

Extensive Preparations For Stupendous Displays

HITLER AND STALIN TO LEAD CELEBRATIONS

London, To-day.
Germany and Russia will this year compete for May Day honours.

Unprecedented preparations have been made in Berlin, where a record crowd of 1,000,000 have been induced to attend a "Labour Day" parade and a stupendous fire-work display, reproducing, according to the newspapers, "The din of a modern battle ground," followed by a one-hour speech by Chancellor Hitler, conveyed through 100 loud speakers.

The address will reveal the first section of his "Four Year Plan" for German restoration.

To prepare the path for a party purge and a big new industrial programme, the authorities in Russia have staged an unprecedented and most impressive tableaux of industrial scenes and illuminated portraits.

S. AFRICA'S OVERSEA TRADE

Favourable Balance Of £37,000,000.

BIG INCREASE ON 1931

Capetown.
Figures showing South Africa's overseas trade for the year ended December 31, 1932, have now been made public. They show a favourable trade balance of £37,000,000 as compared with only £18,000,000 in the previous year.

Although, during the year, South Africa exported 88.1 per cent. of its products to the British Empire — 85.7 per cent. of which went to the United Kingdom — she imported during the year only 55.5 per cent. of her requirements from the Empire, of which 46.6 per cent. came from the United Kingdom.

The United States took 0.5 per cent. of the Union's products, but South Africa bought 13.8 per cent. of her requirements from the United States.

Last year the Union exported goods totalling £69,000,000, a drop of £2,000,000 on the corresponding figure for 1931. — Reuter.

SOVIET - JAPAN TENSION OVER C.E.R. DISPUTE

Scathing Article In Harbin Times.

SOVIET OFFICIAL'S LETTER "BARKING OF A MAD DOG"

Harbin, To-day.

The threat that Manchukuo will be constrained to resort to force to solve the Chinese Eastern Railway dispute is contained in a scathing article in the Japanese-owned newspaper, the "Harbin Times," which characterises M. Kouznetsoff's letter to Li Shao-ken, the Manchukuo Director-General of the Chinese Eastern Railway, as the "barking of a mad dog."

The article says that his demand that normal working conditions should be restored on the Chinese Eastern Railway evokes laughter, as it is "equivalent to a highway robber professing intolerance of stealing." — Reuter.

No Alarm Felt In Tokyo.

JAPANESE FORCE HALVED IN NORTH MANCHURIA.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

Tokyo, Saturday.
The grave view reported to be held abroad regarding the Japanese-Soviet tension, finds little echo in responsible quarters in Tokyo, either Japanese or foreign.

The "Daily Telegraph" believes that the Japanese movements south of the Great Wall are intended to mask troop movements further north is branded as absurd and mischievous, as on the contrary, the Japanese strength in North Manchuria has been cut by half since February last, when two Infantry Brigades and one cavalry Brigade were withdrawn southward for the Jehol operations.

These troops have not yet returned from the south.

NAZI RIVALS MUST SUBMIT TO HITLER

"Steel-Helmets" To Be Absorbed.

MANY DEFECTIONS REPORTED

Leader Asked To Resign His Reichstag Seat

Berlin, To-day.

The eventual absorption of President Hindenburg's "Steel-helmet" troops by Chancellor Hitler's "Brown-shirts," is envisaged as a result of an announcement made yesterday by the Nazi Deputy Leader, Herr Hess, that members of the "Steel-helmet" troops can only join the Nazis by agreeing to submit unreservedly to Hitler's leadership, and by first abandoning membership of the "Steel-helmets."

The announcement also forbids Nazi members to join the "Steel-helmets."

A recent photograph of Adolf Hitler.

It is already reported that there are many defections in the ranks of the "Steel-helmets" despite the leaders' efforts to prevent the falling away.

Herr Franz Seldte, leader of the Stahlhelm, and Minister of Labour in the Hitler Government, went over to the Nazis on Friday, taking many of his followers with him. He stated that those who refused to follow him would be released from the membership oath.

The step has been long expected, and was hastened by the purge of the opposition elements, including Lieut.-Col. Dueterberg, Second-in-Command, who was dismissed on Wednesday last, and Major Wagner, Federal Chancellor of the force.

As a result of his defection, Herr Seldte has been asked by the National Party to resign his Reichstag seat. He has not yet replied to the demand. — Reuter.

ANGLO - PERSIAN TREATY

Negotiations For Close Co-operation.

A RAILWAY TO LINK INDIA AND IRAQ

London, To-day.

The Anglo-Persian oil agreement has opened the path for an Anglo-Persian treaty.

In connection with the agreement, according to the London "Daily Express," the Shah of Persia has agreed to send a Plenipotentiary to London to negotiate a pact for close commercial and diplomatic co-operation between the two countries.

The pact mentions the exclusion of Russian influence in North Persia and a railway linking up Iraq and India. — Reuter.

PERU PRESIDENT ASSASSINATED

Serious Clashes Occur In Lima.

MILITARY FIRE ON ANGRY MOBS

Lima, To-day.

The President of Peru, Lieut.-Col. Luis M. Sanchez Cerro, was assassinated here yesterday. Immediately following the crime, clashes broke out in the streets of the capital, between soldiers and civilians.

Several were killed when the military fired into the angry mobs, and ambulances were busy throughout the night picking up the injured.

President Cerro was elected for a period of five years in October, 1931, and took office in December, the same year. Forty-four years of age, he became a prominent figure in the country when, with a military Junta, he ousted President Leguia by revolutionary methods in 1930. — Reuter.

Bargain Counter Victories

Shopping A Competitive Sport.

Shopping is a fine competitive sport and many suffragette victories were won upon the bargain counters. It should develop clear judgment, swift decision, good taste, perseverance and boundless energy.

The good shopper should be so well acquainted with the vagaries of style that no persuasive saleswoman can work off a freak fashion on her and she must know values accurately enough to appraise bargains. She should know when not to buy as well as when to buy and she should not waste an hour of her time or that of the clerk to save ten cents.

She—but the description of a perfect shopper would outrun the confines of this shop talk, so let us turn to the perfect bargain.

GREEN GOWN WINS PRIZE.

Molyneux Costume Gains Award.

Types and textures in spring and summer cottons are virtually unlimited.

Cottons will figure prominently for town wear in blouses, dresses, jackets and cape suits and coats, in the same categories for commuting and spectator sports wear, and for active sports for trousers, beach and tennis dresses.

There will not be a costume for the coming summer which will be too nonchalant or too dignified to be made in cotton.

Such dainty sheers as puckered, plaid or striped organzies will do their bit toward making summer evening fashions more glamorous.

Trend Of Summer Fashion

Studied Effect In Two-Colour Dresses

VAPOROUS TRIMMINGS

Paris. The special Riviera collection now being shown give full expression to those ideas that were scarcely more than hinted at in the earlier showings of mid-season fashions. These characteristics are all retained but amplified. What was blue then is still bluer now, and what was but brownish has developed into actual brown. A straight sedate line predominates, with no change in silhouette, so that these new materials give to the new models their chief characteristic. With few exceptions the waist-line is in its normal place. The natural shoulder, with sleeves let into the neck band of the material at the back, caught up to the material in front by a seam running the whole length of the arm, is a striking item. One notices a strong tendency towards the wide flat yoke that forms the top of the bodice and a part of the sleeve. There is sleeve-fullness at the elbow.

Capes, especially in day-time dress, remain in great vogue, replacing sleeves or covering tight sleeves. New cuts, some with scalloped edges, others with notched edges, are shown, and I have seen a few with ragged edges that were effective. These may be excessively plain or embroidered along the edge, or piped, or bordered in a number of original ways. A few sensational models have been seen in which only three-quarters of a capelet were used, leaving the clear impression of a short cape from which a section had been cut away; a half-cape effect, was also seen once at the Ritz, and the cape in contrasting colours, one side one colour and the other side another, has had a limited run.

Grecian Draping. One such model produced a contrast of fabric rather than colour, and each half was in a different black material, which was interesting because this studied effect was only perceptible on those observation. A fashion always derives much favour from having different values seen a few yards away and nearby. That was the psychological explanation of the vogue a few seasons back of the dark coat worn over the very bright dress. The wearer approaching with the coat on a few yards away had one aspect, then with the removal of the coat an entirely different one and this fashion had what in Paris is called a success fou.

For evening there are many drapings in the Grecian manner; there is a suggestion of the princess gown, with draping at the waist running on to the top of the bodice almost without décolleté in front, even when the shoulders are bare, some hollowed out as far as the waist. A dignified simplicity predominates in this domain.

FLOWERS.

Big artificial flower posies are worn on evening coats. Some of the latest caps are made entirely of feathers or flowers.

CAPE GAIN WIDE FAVOUR.

Worn With Almost Every Kind Of Frock

Paris. Capes, small, medium and large—are worn with almost everything, alternating with a similar use of jackets in all three sizes mentioned above.

Both cape and jacket is made of the same material as the dress over which it is worn. Wide bands over the shoulders take the place, in some cases, of puffed sleeves, but the latter are still decidedly in vogue.

Harness backs for evening gowns continued to portray great originality in twisting, curving and cutting.

An important cape of the season is made by Vionnet. It has three-quarter dolman sleeves and is in shell-pink crepe, bordered in sable. It is designed to be worn with a dress of shell-pink crepe, simply but as to bodice and full, long skirt.

The new Chapel of St. Peter in the Seamen's Institute, which takes the place of the old Church of St. Peter, West Point, was yesterday afternoon dedicated by the Bishop of Victoria, the Rt. Rev. Ronald Hall.

The service commenced at 3 p.m., a vast congregation being present.

The Bishop, who was accompanied by the Rev. E. W. L. Martin (Chaplain, in the absence, through indisposition, of the Rev. N. V. Halward), the Pro-Chancellor of the Diocese (Hon. Sir Henry Pollock, K.C.), and Mr. T. H. R. Shaw, representing the Committee, on entering the Chapel was petitioned by the Rev. Mr. Waldegrave to consecrate the Church. Clergy participating were the Revs. W. Walton Rogers, E. G. Powell, E. L. Allen, A. D. Stewart, G. K. Carpenter, Kau Yan-lee, and N. Chamberlain, R.N.

Sir Henry Pollock read the sentence of consecration, and the document was signed by the Bishop.

At the conclusion of the service of dedication, the visitors were served with refreshments in the main dining room.

PRETTY WEDDING AT CATHEDRAL

Miss F. B. Macfadyen & Dr. G. V. Griffith.

HONEYMOON AT TAIPO

A very charming wedding took place at St. John's Cathedral on Saturday, when Miss Frances Barbara Macfadyen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Macfadyen of Hong Kong became the wife of Dr. G. V. Griffith of the Government Medical Department.

The bride who was given away by her father, was gracefully gowned in a Princess robe of ivory tulle with full sleeves and train cut in panels. Her long Brussels net veil was held by a wreath of tiny orange blossoms and finished with clusters of the same flower, completing an extremely pleasing effect by "Eunice". She carried a bouquet of beautiful, selected lilies.

Miss Helen Knill and Miss Betty Laing, the bridesmaids, wore beautiful dresses of daffodil shades, finished with velvet sashes and cloche hats of tulle and straw. They carried bouquets of Larkspur.

Miss Athol Dovey, the flower girl, wore a Victorian dress and also carried a posy of Larkspur.

Mrs. A. L. F. Dovey was matron of honour, while Mr. D. L. Prophet discharged the duties of best man. Mr. H. H. Beddow and Mr. E. H. Williams were the groomsmen.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's father's residence, 4 Basilea, the happy couple leaving later for Taiipo where they will spend their honeymoon.

The bride's going away dress was a Sapphire Blue ensemble by "Eunice" with hat, bag and shoes to match.

BORN ON FAMOUS SAILING SHIP.

Brisbane Woman Visits Birthplace.

Sydney. Born 66 years ago on the famous sailing vessel Sobraon, while her parents were on a holiday trip to England, Mrs. A. H. Brooks, of Toowong, Brisbane, revisited this old ship now known as the Tingira, and until recently a training ship of the Royal Australian Navy.

Mrs. Brooks was born in the month of May. The choice of a Christian name worried her parents, but the skipper, Captain Kyle settled it.

"Call her May, Kyle, Sobraon," he suggested, and the parents accepting the unusual names had her christened by the captain.

Incidentally the name of her home in Toowong is "Sobraon."—Reuter.

When The King Goes Aboard His Yacht

No Spoken Orders On "Robot" Ship

OLD CUSTOMS SURVIVE

(By Howard Spring.)

"Royal yachts," by Paymaster-commander C. M. Gavin, has been launched like a galleon by Messrs. Rich and Cowan. It is a sumptuous book, printed on paper like parchment, bound in royal blue morocco with the Royal Standard in gold on the front. It is lavishly illustrated, and many of the pictures reproduced are the property of the King, by whose special permission they appear here. The cost of the book is four guineas, and only 1,000 copies will be printed.

We are given the story of royal yachts throughout the centuries; but to most of us the chief interest on the description of life on the Victoria and Albert when the King goes to Cowes.

The Victoria and Albert is the third of her line. Two yachts of the name were built for Queen Victoria; the yacht now in commission was built for Edward VII. Her full complement is 367 officers and men, all drawn from the Royal Navy and specially selected. She is designed to steam 2,500 miles at 14 knots. Her tonnage is 4,700 displacement (light draught), which makes her the largest yacht in the world.

Intensive Preparation.

With the coming of summer, the Victoria and Albert undergoes intensive preparation for the culmination of Cowes Week. She runs out of Portsmouth and in the Channel her machinery is tested and her compasses are adjusted. Then she goes back to her buoy in the harbour, and for six weeks the painters are busy. Her sides and weather work are freshened; the Royal barge, the motor-boat, the steam-boat, the pulling boats are made radiant with enamel; the Royal Arms on each bow are picked out anew; and all this small fleet is hoisted to the davits of the parent ship.

In the after part of the vessel is the Court post office, and here officials are busy, for whether the yacht is alongside the Portsmouth Dockyard or moored to her buoy at Cowes, his Majesty must be in touch with London.

The Master of the Household has sent his cabin plan, and all must be put in readiness for the visitors. Those who know begin to take a hand on the personal side. Ornaments and photographs appear from drawers and cupboards. Carpets are laid. Dust-sheets are whisked away.

The Day Before The Arrival.

And now here is the day before their Majesties' arrival. The yacht is at the Southern Railway jetty. The royal train can be brought alongside over the swing bridge from Portsmouth Harbour station. A special train comes with luggage, provisions, royal servants. Pages and footmen, dressers, chefs, valet, butler, the Court postmaster and telegraphist, the Court police superintendent. Many of them come year after year. They know their grooves and slide easily into them.

In the morning comes the Royal Marine Band, the men wearing the words "Royal Yacht" on the right shoulder. They will play for lunch and dinner, and for divine service.

Carpets go down on the decks; red kersey covers steps and gangways. Their Majesties arrive. The admiral receives them at the foot of the gangway. The officers stand in single file facing outboard. The ship's company are mustered 'at divisions' on the side nearer the jetty. The officers are in frock-coats with swords, and the men are in their No. 1 dress. Preceded by the admiral, who leads the way up the gangway, his Majesty is piped on board.

The Royal Standard breaks and twenty-one guns boom the Royal salute.

No Voice of Command.

And then, if you were standing on the quayside, you would see a strange thing. Without any of that shouting and tumult, that rattling of orders and responsive cry of

"Ay, ay, sir!" with which most ships put to sea, the Victoria and Albert slides away. "Only the splash of the cast-off hawsers," says our author, "and the sound of the engine-room telegraphs break the silence."

And so it will be when the yacht reaches Cowes. No voice will be heard raised in command; it will seem as though the Victoria and Albert is a robot ship, acting of her own volition. The fact is that every man connected with the yacht, afloat or ashore, must know what is expected of him at any given moment, and do it. The lift of a finger, the tremor of an eyelid, is order enough. Someone is looking for it, sees it, and jumps to it.

All the time the King is aboard this cult of silence continues. The officer of the watch calls boats alongside and hoists them to the davits' heads by signs. "And at night in harbour he creeps round the deck in rubber-soled shoes, seeking untoward sounds that may disturb the stillness of the night."

Every officer and man aboard must learn to fit into this life fined down to the last degree of precedent and regulations. If he cannot do so, he is of no use for this service. There are no punishments aboard the Victoria and Albert. The offender goes. That is all. And so in the course of years a perfect ship's company has been built up, and like an efficient automaton the Victoria and Albert goes her way.

Man-of-War Routine.

Man-of-war routine is followed, with that single exception of the unspoken command. At seven in the morning and nine at night the weather reports are taken to the King, and at ten in the morning and after dinner he inspects the chart. Though modernity reigns, some relics from the old days of royal yachts are permitted to survive: the ship's fiddler, for example, who is carried as well as the band, and the hand-steering wheels and binnacles that were in the Royal George—the yacht on which the Regent had some high old times.

Paymaster-commander Gavin has given us a fine book, and the publishers have housed the work nobly. The story begins as far back as the tenth century, with proud King's ships inlaid with gold, sweeping along under the swell of purple sails. It was Charles II, who first made popular the yachts which he had learned to love during his exile in Holland; and from his yacht the Fubbs right up to the third Victoria and Albert we are given here a handsome DeBrett of distinguished ships.

BAN ON G. B. SHAW BOOK.

Action By Education Committee.

The Education Committee of the London County Council have banned Mr. Bernard Shaw's latest work, "A Black Girl in Search of God." The Book and Apparatus Sub-Committee have decided not to include the book in the Teachers' Library.

At a meeting of the Committee at County Hall, Mrs. Barbara Drake (Socialist) protested at the non-inclusion of the book in the Teachers' Library.

The Rev. A. G. Prichard said that he was not in favour of anything in the nature of an index with regard to books for the Teachers' Library, but he considered that the Committee had acted wisely in regard to this book. "It does not show Mr. Shaw at his best, and it is a book which is offensive to quite a number of people."

Mr. E. J. Sainsbury, Chairman of the Sub-Committee, said that for the purpose of adding books to the Teachers' Library their money was limited.

"That being so," he added, "and this being a book which some people regard as of doubtful morality, it was decided not to place it in the library."

LIFE OF A SOVIET WORKER

Investigations Of The "Tshistka."

GERMAN WOMAN'S BOOK

London.

Talks to Soviet workers and descriptions of incidents happening to them are described by Fraulein Lilli Korber, a German subject, in "Life in a Soviet Factory."

Fraulein Korber, who speaks Russian fluently, lived in a workers' community house while employed in the Putilov works in Leningrad, where she drilled levers for tractors. She described the "tshistka" or "purge" which takes place at intervals when workmen's commissions are sent to the public offices to scrutinise the work of the officials. They try to find out what they can about the antecedents and loyalty of these officials.

"If any particular person is suspected," Fraulein Korber writes, "he or she is cited to a public 'tshistka' or commission, where anyone may put forward accusations. Evidence is heard and the commission makes its decision."

"The 'purged' one may be declared innocent, let off with a warning, or dismissed. In specially bad cases he may be forbidden to take any other post for a certain period."

"No matter how innocent he or she may be, every official trembles at the thought of the 'tshistka'."

One of the conversations described by the author is one she had with a Russian doctor. "The doctor related an incident from her own experience," says Fraulein Korber.

"A Georgian who was married to one of her friends was very jealous; he made a scene whenever his wife came home late and refused to believe her when she said she had been to party meetings. When the 'tshistka' took place, she (the doctor) denounced this man, although he was a colleague of hers and she was friendly with his family."

"He was hauled over the coals very thoroughly and threatened with expulsion from the Communist party. Whether he saw the error of his ways or whether he was afraid of what might happen next time, the fact remains that he ceased to molest his wife."

No Privacy.

"Communists have no private lives," said the doctor; "in fact no citizens of the Soviet Union have private lives. Every individual belongs in the first place to the community, which has a right to know what sort of a person he is."

The author says that the factory worked in shifts of 7½ hours, and relates that after a night shift she went home to the communal dwelling "where 25 young people of ages between 17 and 24 live in close contact with one another. The place seethes like an ant-hill at this hour."

Fraulein Korber tells the story of a holiday trip. "The trains were filled to overflowing," she says, "although there is a half-hourly service and only one-fifth of the working population is on holiday."

"But that is quite usual in the Soviet Union; there is overcrowding in all spheres of life such as housing and accommodation, business premises, cinemas and transport facilities. The State is not yet in a position to satisfy its new customers, the masses."

The author says, in a discussion on social relationships, that: "As church weddings are private luxuries and divorces extremely easy to procure, marriage as such has lost its social significance."—Reuter.

PEIPING RARE BOOKS, MANUSCRIPTS.

To Be Sent To Shanghai For Safety.

The employees of the Peiping National University are busy at work packing the rare books and manuscripts of the University Library into wooden cases in preparation for their transportation to Shanghai. Two hundred cases are reported to have been already packed and it is expected that the total shipment will comprise over 600 cases.

According to an official of the University, the scientific apparatus and archives of the university will also be sent to Shanghai if the situation warrants. On arrival at Shanghai the books will be stored in the old Tung Wen College.

"COMEDY OF THE POUND"

Interesting Angle On Gold Standard.

London.

"Far be it from me to pose as a financial expert but I cannot help feeling impressed after glancing through the pages of Paul Einzig's 'The Comedy of the Pound' (Kegan Paul, 7/6.) The author makes even the dreary subject of the Gold Standard sound interesting," writes a Reuter Correspondent.

He is a pungent critic, too. Of the Bank of England, for instance, he writes:

"At present, the executive of the Bank of England includes at least one distinguished statesman, at least two distinguished diplomats, at least two distinguished academic economists, at least three distinguished civil servants, any number of distinguished accountants and even a few distinguished bankers, but not a single foreign exchange dealer with up-to-date experience in the market."

The official policy of the authorities, our author finds, suffers from "indecision" and "timidity" and "lack of foresight" and "an utter lack of consistency." Otherwise, perhaps, all right.

Dr. Einzig is connected with a financial paper and he suggests that there should be a closer relationship between the Bank of England and the Press. The papers, he thinks—surely rightly?—"should be given the facilities to present to the public the right facts in the right way." As things are at present the newspapers "either lend themselves as the mouthpiece of official quarters without venturing even to express the mildest form of criticism, or else they recklessly attack the authorities and are so utterly and obviously prejudiced that their criticism is thereby rendered worthless."

And so "between the two extremes the man in the street stands bewildered and completely at a loss whom to believe."

Which is just my position. Now Dr. Einzig should discuss for us "The Comedy of the Dollar."

NO MEMOIRS FROM M. BRIAND'S PEN.

Late French President's Quotations Recalled.

"TRUTH A LIE THAT LASTS"

Paris. "Why should I write my memoirs? To write memoirs is to divide events which one has witnessed into two groups; those that went well and those that went badly. One claims the authorship of the first, and attributes the latter to one's adversaries. That is what is called history."

These quotations, made by the late Aristide Briand, are told by M. Andre Maurois in an article in the recent issue of "Les Annales." At one time, reports the French writer, Briand was asked to explain truth.

"Truth?" he said, "who was it that described it as a lie that lasts?" "Snowden was not a bad man—not at all," Briand said another time. "Only he arrived at the Hague with mistaken notions about France and he put himself in a very false position. He did not know how to get out of it. He has a wife who is charming."

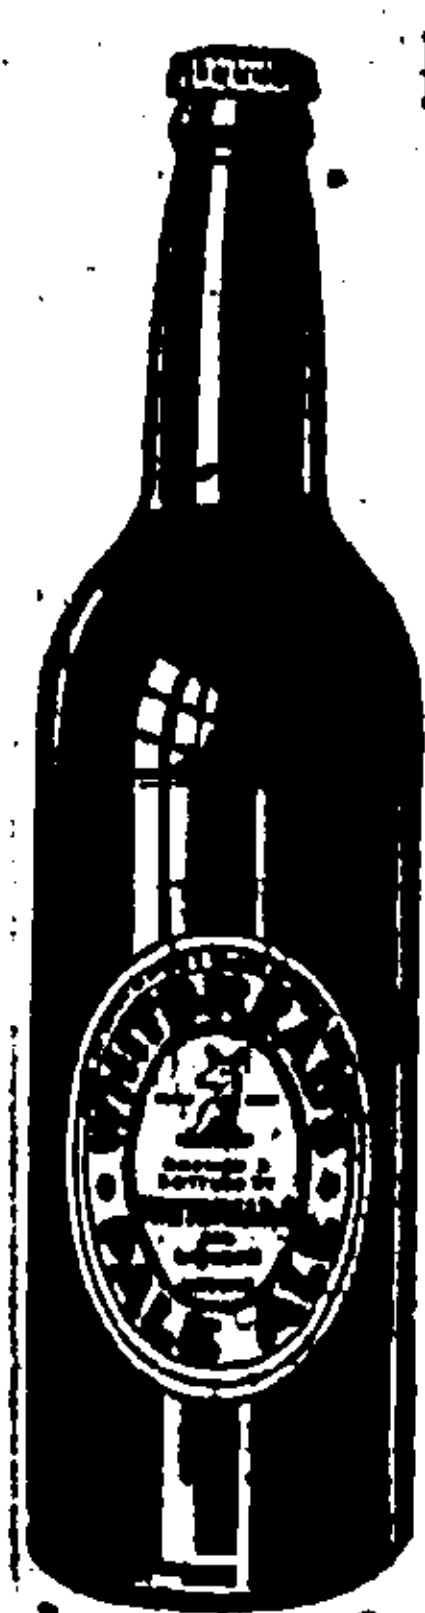

An instance is recalled in the article when Briand took Chancellor Luther and Mr. Chamberlain to dinner for a quiet talk. Luther, much moved began a speech.

"Keep that for our Parliaments," said Briand. "We are here to eat quietly and if we have to say difficult, even painful things, let us say them but without phraseology."—Reuter.

Germany.

The military character of the Hitler regime, the associations of members of the Hohenzollern family with the Nazi party and the revival of the nationalist and martial spirit in Germany all reflect the efforts of the present administration to restore to Germany her former prestige. That these efforts, directed not only by the Nazis but also by President Hindenburg and the Stahlhelm, may create grave friction in Europe is the anxiety of the rest of the world. The Imperial splendour of the Potsdam ceremony of the opening of the Reichstag indicates the present trend of German sentiment. To every German—and to every Pole—Frederick the Great was the ruler who harked the two portions of Prussia, then as now sundered by a strip of Poland; to all the world he was the supreme man of arms, cynical, and ruthless, whose consummate qualities, in the words of Lord Rosebery, were a curse to his age and to his kind. That brilliant student of history wrote that ever since Frederick's day Prussia had been like a pike in a pond, armed with sharp teeth and endless voracity, "poised for a dart when the proper prey shall appear." And he added that her "policy, brutal as it is, requires genius, and Prussia has not been richly endowed in that way." Whatever the qualities of the rulers of Germany to-day—and nobody will deny greatness to President Hindenburg or a remarkable power of eloquence and political strategy to Herr Hitler—it is clear that the circumstances and the ideals of this age differ entirely from those of the eighteenth century, and it is fair to presume that in seeking inspiration from the example of the famous conqueror the rulers of modern Germany intend to apply the lesson to wholly different purposes. "No Honour without Battle" was indeed one of the slogans displayed in the ceremony at the opening of the Reichstag, and it is said to have been designed by the Chancellor himself. Herr Hitler certainly declared in a recent speech, "I am for force, because in force I see strength, and in strength the eternal mother of rights, and in rights the roots of life." But these words, Frederickian in sentiment if un-Frederickian in phrasing, were undoubtedly intended for home consumption; and the savagery of the German revival has so far been directed almost exclusively against Germany. However much foreign friends of the country may deplore the cruelties inflicted by German upon German, the destruction of patriotic servants of the State on account of their political beliefs, the brutal maltreatment of artists and tradespeople on account of their racial origin, and the destruction of cultural values—all this is primarily a matter for Germany herself.

Only if these methods were to be applied to foreign subjects, or transferred to the field of foreign affairs, would they become a matter of concern to other countries; and a development in that sense would have the immediate, inevitable, and deplorable effect of isolating Germany and of driving foreign Governments to concert policy together against her. This is a development which every country in Europe—and indeed everywhere—is most definitely anxious to avoid.

The result of Mr. MacDonald's visit to Rome which has been most universally acclaimed is that which linked Germany with the other three Western Powers in a partnership for the common consideration of the problems of the moment. The proposal put forward by Signor Mussolini has had a favourable reception in Germany; and Herr Hitler in a recent speech spoke of the desire of the German nation to "be true friends, of a peace which would at last heal the wounds from which all suffer." He dwelt upon the terrible economic distress of the people, which the Government were determined to remedy; and he coupled a call for unity with a threat "to render harmless those who try to injure the State." In all of this there is nothing yet to show that the new Chancellor intends to be immoderate in his foreign policy. It is his set purpose—and in that he has much sympathy outside his own country—to re-establish Germany on a footing of equality with other nations; and the internal excesses of his regime should not debar foreign statesmanship from examining with an open mind the external claims of the German, as they would of any other, Government. If the conclusion is reached that certain articles of the Peace Treaty may have been harsh in conception, or may be unjust in their present application, they should be unhesitatingly modified or cancelled. The continuance of legitimate German grievances would only be a cause of continual unrest for the whole of Europe. The claims in regard to disarmament should be examined as early as possible in the spirit of the Four Power Plan and the British proposals at Geneva. The new spirit of Potsdam will be innocuous to the rest of the world if it implies only a resurrection of German self-respect. That President Hindenburg interprets Prussian traditions in that sense is clear from the words which he used at the Potsdam ceremony. "The place where we are assembled recalls to our minds the old God-fearing Prussia, which by conscientious work, unflinching courage, and devotion to the Fatherland became great and brought unity to the German family. May the spirit of this historic place also inspire the generation of to-day, and draw hour with a top speed exceeding 120 miles an hour."

And still there are some people who allege it is perfectly impossible to be happy in this world.

HERE, THERE and EVERYWHERE

Splitting The Atom.

The wonderful Ludwig Mond Laboratory at Cambridge, just opened, contains an apparatus for splitting the atom on a scale unknown before. It is an electrical generator which will provide a current of tens of thousands of amperes, comparable with the output of the largest of London's power stations.

So intense is the current that if it were left flowing for a tenth of a second, the copper of the coil through which it passed would melt. Actually the experiment has to be completed in 1-100th of a second.

Everything is done automatically. A signal lamp flashes from the control board, a button is pressed, there is a sudden jolt, and all is over.

During the brief time the pressure in the coil is from 20 to 30 tons per square inch!

The attack on the atom is conducted at as low a temperature as possible, as atoms are then moving more slowly than at normal. Actually the lowest temperature is obtained by liquefying helium. This temperature is minus 448 degrees Fahrenheit. At this extremely low temperature—a temperature unknown in Nature—gases exhibit new phenomena.

In the new laboratory the Russian scientist, Professor Kapitza, who left Russia to work with Lord Rutherford, will carry on the atomic research to which he has devoted the last ten years. Any day we may hear of some wonderful new discovery. The laboratory cost £15,000.

BRITAIN'S PROBLEM IN INDIA

EMPIRE'S GREATEST WORK THREATENED

SHALL WE THROW IT AWAY?

By Sir Michael O'Dwyer

(Former Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.)

"Providence, alone protects our Empire. We, on our part, are doing all we can to destroy it."

That is what Demosthenes said of Athens over 2,000 years ago; it might, with equal truth, be said of the Indian policy of the British Government to-day. The Indian Empire has been the greatest achievement of our ancestors; it has rescued a sub-continent from chronic anarchy, invasion and civil war—such as we see in China to-day—and given security, impartial justice and ordered progress to 363 millions of people.

That stupendous work has been created and is maintained by three forces:

Loyalty to the King-Emperor, which unites in a common allegiance the Princes and peoples of India;

The efficiency and integrity of the Civil administration, the standards of which have been built up by the small British element (not more than 3,000 in all) in the various services, I.C.S., Police, Public Works, Forests, Education, Agriculture, etc., with an Indian personnel running to hundreds of thousands;

The British Army (60,000 strong), the British Indian Army (160,000), held together by some 2,000 British officers, and that gallant and loyal force, the Indian Police, some 187,000 men under 600 British and 200 Indian officers.

These secure India against internal disorder and invasion; by land, while the British Navy holds the seas. All have worked in harmony under the control of the Crown and Parliament exercised through the Viceroy and Governors of Provinces.

Socialist Policy

It is now proposed, in pursuance of the policy declared by the Prime Minister, as head of the Socialist Government two years ago, and repeated by him as head of the National Government in December 1931, "that responsibility for the Government of India should be placed on Indian legislatures, central and provincial, with temporary provisions and reservations for the period of transition."

That declaration of Socialist policy was foreshadowed in "Labour and the Nation." There was no demand for it from the Indian peoples, of whom certainly not one in a hundred has grasped its import; there was certainly no mandate for it here at the last election or from the Conservative M.P.s who form three-fourths of the present House of Commons.

The policy is not, as the Government claim, one of admitting India into partnership in the British Empire; it is a policy of abdication—partial to start with, complete "after a period of transition," and Indian Moderate politicians are already demanding a time limit for the withdrawal of the legions and the disappearance of the senior partner.

Now, if it could be shown that British abdication were in the best interests of the peoples of India it would be wise to withdraw honourably after safeguarding our financial and other interests. But not even the most extreme Indian politician has dared seriously to advance such an argument; it is admitted that the continuance of British rule is to the benefit of the Indian peoples; that the relaxation of that rule in the last 12 years has led to an alarming increase in crime, corruption and inefficiency; and that the withdrawal now contemplated would be a disaster to England and India.

Throwing Empire Away

A gallant Indian gentleman said to a former Prime Minister in the writer's presence on the day of the present Prime Minister's Cautious Declaration, "To-day you are throwing the away; an empire, opening the gates of India to the invader, and preparing the way for civil war."

That will be the ultimate result of the policy: the White Paper explains how it is to be carried out.

It begins by abolishing or sapping the three forces which keep India together. Under the proposals for an all-India Federation and provincial autonomy, the control of the Crown and Parliament is restricted—and that only "for a period of transition"—to defence, foreign and ecclesiastical affairs; all the authority now exercised by the Viceroy and Governors over the civil administration passes to Indian Ministers, responsible in theory to Indian legislatures on whose advice the Governor-general and Governors must act except in the cases noted below. They will have no British colleague, though the Viceroy is given a financial adviser; no trained British officials either in the legislature or the administration to advise them; they can only see them through the eyes and ears of the Indian Ministers, who may be often inexperienced, or incompetent, sometimes openly or secretly hostile; for the Congress party, supported by ambitious lawyers, covetous money-lenders, and exploiting manufacturers, will capture several of the Provinces and not improbably the Central Government.

Civil Service Control

The control of all the Civil Services is to pass to these Ministers; British recruitment will cease except in the I.C.S. and Police, and the proposal to retain it for a time in these pivotal services has already aroused a storm of opposition from the Indian politicians who covet their places. The result will be the rapid disappearance of the British personnel, which forms the steel frame, or, to use another figure, the cement, which holds the whole administrative structure together; and the Government of India show that they share this view by their recent announcement allowing these officers to retire on proportionate pensions.

The next danger will be that these services transferred from impartial British control to Indian political control—and we know what that means in the East—will crack. In particular, the Indian police, placed under Ministers who often will be the very men whose seditious activities they have so gallantly fought against for years, will regard themselves as betrayed by us to their enemies. We have had a parallel in Ireland; and the despairing cry which the writer heard from a loyal Sikh magnate years ago will become general: "How long can a Government last from which its friends have nothing to hope, its foes nothing to fear?"

The margin of security in India is already a very narrow one; our success in the campaign against

MILITARY IDEA GAINS GROUND UNDER HITLER

Germany May Return To Conscription.

ENTHUSIASM FOR MILITARY TRAINING.

Berlin. Unless signs are misleading, Germany again will be a military nation before another year is past.

Outwardly it already has a military aspect. The brown uniforms of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's National Socialist storm troops dominate the street scene. Protected by the police and having the sympathy of the regular army of 100,000 permitted by the treaty of Versailles, these 800,000 brown shirts confidently await the moment when universal military training shall have been restored in the fatherland.

For Conscription. And not only these 800,000 believe in a conscript army or militia. So do the 1,000,000 world war veterans who drill with the Steel Helmet association. So do the vast majority of the millions of voters who cast ballots for Hitler in recent elections and for President von Hindenburg a year ago.

Nor is the enthusiasm for military training confined to the nationalistic parties of the right. Heinrich Brüning, Centrist leader, when he was chancellor never made a secret of his belief that every male citizen should be taught to shoulder a rifle.

The republican Reichsbanner, made up chiefly of Socialists with a fair sprinkling of Centrists, was outspokenly in favour of the national "curatorium for strengthening youth," formed under the aegis of General Wilhelm Groener, former minister of defence and as staunch a republican as ever held a cabinet seat in post-war Germany. That plan contemplated mass training in setting-up exercises, scaling walls and similar military stunts and in teaching youth to obey commands.

Pacifists Few. Roughly speaking it can be asserted that only a small fraction of the Socialists, the consistent pacifists and the Communists are opposed to re-introduction of conscription.

Hitler is counted upon to carry out plans for a people's army. His party has been committed from the beginning to that idea and its whole organization is along military lines. All over Germany leaders and sub-leaders among the storm troops and the steel helmeters are expecting the summons to help organize Germany's new conscript militia.

Officers of the Reichswehr, or regular army, also are eager for the day when the clumping goose step shall resound once more along German streets and by-ways.

Promotion in the small, select professional army has been slow. A conscript system would make better jobs for all these professional soldiers.—A.P.

$250 THEFT BY BAILEE

Serious View Taken By Court.

6 WEEKS' SENTENCE

Chan Hung, charged with larceny by a bailee of a sum of $250 from Ling Sai-siu at No. 9 Sai Street, ground floor, on October 6, 1932, was this morning sentenced to six weeks' hard labour by Mr. Wynne-Jones, who told the accused the law took a very serious view of such cases.

Det. Sgt. Allen who prosecuted said he had made inquiries and had found that the accused, after absconding had made for Shatin, where he had been ever since.

Ling Sai-siu said the man who recommended the accused to him as a bailee, had already robbed him of $45,000.

Mr. Wynne-Jones:—Have you taken Police proceedings against him?

Witness:—No, I cannot find him.

THEFT OF ELECTRICAL PUMP MOTOR

Lam Shek, a 24-year old Chinese male, who came before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Magistracy this morning, denied that he had stolen an electrical pump motor from No. 30 Lockhart Road on Friday night, last. Accused said he picked it up from the pavement outside the premises where he thought it had apparently been thrown.

Sentence of one month's hard labour was imposed.

STIFF FINES FOR JOY-RIDER

"Borrowed" European's Motor Car.

THREE COMPANIONS REMANDED

Wong Hung-shun, an unemployed Chinese of 26, this morning pleaded guilty, before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Magistracy, to driving private motor car No. 3173 on Saturday night, without a licence, and without the permission of the owner, Mr. A. R. Cox, of Causeway Bay Road.

Inspector C. F. Alexander of the Traffic Branch said that on Saturday at 8.30 p.m. Mr. Cox left his Studebaker motor car outside the Star Ferry at Connaught Road Central. When he returned at about 2 a.m. on Sunday morning he found his car missing, and although he travelled round the block in a ricksha, he could find no trace of it. He made a report to the I.O.D., Central Police Station, and a description of the car was circulated to all stations.

Sgt. Fryer of the Traffic Department, who was on motor-cycle patrol between Causeway Bay and Aberdeen, picked up the car at Aberdeen, and noted that there were five occupants in it at the time. He followed it all the way past the village and stopped it a mile further on.

He asked the accused if he had a driving licence. Receiving a negative reply he ordered the accused out of the driver's seat and leaving his motor-cycle on the side of the road, drove the stolen car to Pokfulam Police Station where he picked up an Indian constable and then drove to the Central Police Station.

Inspector Alexander said the three other Chinese males, Chan Siu, Tam So and Chan Ping, had been charged with aiding and abetting the first accused, with driving the car without the permission of the owner.

Mr. Wynne-Jones:—How did the other members of the party know that the first accused had not the permission of the owner to drive the car?

Insp. Alexander:—They must have known that the car did not belong to the accused and that he did not possess a driving licence.

"But sitting in the back of a car does not constitute aiding and abetting the driving of a car, and I do not see where it comes in. Of course, you will have to bring evidence to show they were aiding and abetting."

"Yes, Your Worship, if you will grant a 24 hours' remand I will bring the evidence."

His Worship remanded the three accused on bail of $50.

The first accused was convicted on both counts and fined $25 or 14 days on the first charge, and $150 or six weeks on the second charge.

ARRIVAL ON SATURDAY.

Flight From Shanghai To Hong Kong.

Mlle. Maryse Hilz, the noted French aviatrix, arrived in the Colony on her return flight from Tokyo to Paris at about 5.15 p.m. on Saturday. She took almost exactly nine hours for her flight from Shanghai.

Bad weather was encountered almost all the way from Shanghai. Low clouds and rain hampered the flier almost all the time. In spite of this, however, the famous aviatrix is making splendid time, and hopes to beat the Tokyo-Paris record.

She was welcomed by a large crowd on her arrival here. Many of the local French community, including the French Consul, M. Dufauré de la Prade, and the Vice Consul Mons. J. Royere, were present at Kai Tak.

Mlle. Hilz saw her plane refueled, and then spent the night at the Peninsula Hotel.

Mlle. Hilz interviewed.

Interviewed at the Peninsula Hotel on Saturday night, Mlle. Hilz told the China Mail that she had encountered very bad weather conditions on the whole of her flight. After leaving Swatow, a violent rainstorm drove her 30 miles off her original course, making her about an hour overdue at Kai Tak.

FAMOUS U.S. PILOT COMING TO HONG KONG

Major Doolittle Leaves Shanghai.

HOLDS WORLD'S SPEED RECORD FOR LAND PLANES.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

Shanghai, Saturday. Major James H. Doolittle, the American stunt flier, whose aerial acrobatics delighted thousands here recently, left for Hong Kong this morning.

Further significance is lent to Major Doolittle's visit by the fact that another first-class airman, Lt. Hall is on his way from San Francisco to serve as instructor with the Chinese Air Force, and that other well-known American flyers will shortly follow.

While in Shanghai, Major Doolittle demonstrated the capabilities of a new pursuit plane with a maximum speed of 245 miles per hour. The demonstration was conducted by the China National Aviation Corporation, who are taking care of the servicing of the new fighter.

If found satisfactory, it is anticipated that the machine will be the forerunner of a powerful fleet of similar planes for China's modern air force.

Brilliant Record

Major Doolittle served with the U.S. Aviation Forces from 1917 until 1920 when he resigned his commission, being placed on the U.S. Reserve list. One of his most notable air feats was the winning of the Schneider Trophy Race in 1925 and the following year, he was awarded the Mackay Trophy. In 1930, he was awarded the coveted Harmon Trophy for having contributed more than any other aviator towards the advancement of aviation in the United States. The following years, competing in the U.S. National Air Meeting, he won the Bendix Trophy Race from Burbank, California, to Cleveland, Ohio. Another of his notable feats was his record-breaking U.S. coast-to-coast dash which he covered in 11 hours and 11 minutes.

World's Record

Last year, on September 3, competing in the U.S. National Air Meeting at Cleveland, Ohio, Major Doolittle set a world's speed record for land planes, speeding 305,050 miles per hour over an official three kilometre course. In last year's national races, Major Doolittle used the Gee Bee racer constructed for Russell Boardman, who was unable to compete due to injuries. The Major's own plane cracked up near Wichita, Kansas, when the ship's retractable gear failed to function properly, but he escaped with a bad shaking up.

Major Doolittle is a Fellow of the Aeronautical Engineers of the Mass. Institute of Technology and is considered one of the world's best pilots. After resigning from the U.S. Aviation Forces, Major Doolittle went into business with James Haislip, popular and wealthy St. Louis airman and in this connection, it is rather interesting to note that Haislip wrested the coast-to-coast record from his business associate at last year's U.S. National Air Races, flying from Los Angeles to New York in 10 hours and 19 minutes. Major Doolittle holds the Distinguished Service Cross with leaves.

To-Day's Short Story.

PORTRAIT OF A LADY ON PARK AVENUE

By Michael Arlen.

Is it of any importance to know her name? Well, let us call her Consuelo. No, there are too many Consuelos—tall, slender women with tranquil gestures, who merge into the atmosphere of panelled rooms like the echoes of forgotten waltzes.

Then let us call her Drusair. You will say that is no name for a lady, but for a pirate's daughter, and you will be quite right, for her father was a Power in Wall Street. And so he died in the odour of sanctity, leaving a million dollars multiplied by so much. And Drusair got the lot.

Is it of any importance to know her age? Well, she still remembered her first lover. What else? Oh, Drusair, what of your soul? Well, emotionally she was unimportant, like a play by Mr. Noel Coward, but her construction was faultless, like a play by Mr. Noel Coward.

But we are forgetting one thing. Drusair was beautiful. Oh, Drusair, who but you in all the world can wear slender loveliness with such poignant grace?

Now, one evening not long ago, Drusair was dressing for dinner in her apartment on Park Avenue. I shall not describe it, for what would be the use, since you and I could never afford such an apartment. Let us say merely this—Drusair did not own one Marie Laurencin. It was by such touches of sympathetic originality that she made Englishmen suspect her of being clever.

Having bathed, she was at the stage of dressing when stockings look absurdly charming. She sat at her dressing-table with crossed legs. Drusair's legs were known not as legs but as the Pride of South Carolina, and they were so beautiful that it can be said that she was attached to them spiritually rather than physically.

Her English maid, Jenkins, fearing Drusair might catch a chill, covered her with a wrap of white lame fringed with a couple of dozen or so of ermines. The telephone bell rang.

"A gentleman," said Jenkins, "to speak to you, madam." Drusair was looking at her finger-nails, which were polished and coloured in a normally barbaric way.

"From London," Jenkins added.

"Name?" Drusair said. "He gives no name, madam."

"Then how, Jenkins, do you know he is a gentleman?"

"His voice is English, madam, and he must have money to call from London to New York."

"Jenkins," said Drusair, "you are a dear."

"Thank you, madam. What shall I tell the gentleman?"

"Tell him I am not at home if he won't give his name. Shall Britannia waive the rules? Never, Jenkins!"

"Very good, madam."

Drusair looked deep into Drusair's eyes and lightly used a pencil.

JADE THEFTS FROM CURIO SHOP.

Two Chinese Gaoled.

Mak Wan and Wong Sam, two unemployed Chinese males, this morning pleaded guilty before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Magistracy, to larceny of two pieces of jade worth $5, and the first defendant to an additional charge of unlawful possession of two lock openers.

The defendants were on Saturday seen to enter the Yik Ki, curio shop at No. 3 Ting Street, and open a showcase which was unlocked at the time, extracting two pieces of rough jade valued at $5. They were arrested and later charged.

Sentence of four months' hard labour on the first charge and three months' hard labour on the second charge were imposed on Mak Wan, the sentences to run consecutively.

Wong Sam was given four months' hard labour on the first charge.

Both the accused were also given two years' Police Restriction.

"And what did your gentleman say, Jenkins?"

"He just sighed, madam."

Drusair smiled, and you at once understood why men and dogs followed her about in great numbers. But she preferred horses.

"Do you think, Jenkins, I have made him unhappy?"

"Men sigh very easily, madam."

"That is true, Jenkins. Men sigh very easily. But women have one wonderful gift."

"What is that, madam?"

"They can forget pain. Where am I dining to-night?"

"With Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Williams, madam."

"Give me the white Patou and the rubies. I should like to look my best to-night. It is an anniversary, Jenkins."

"May I ask of what, madam?"

"You would disapprove, Jenkins."

The telephone bell rang.

"London calling again, madam."

TO-MORROW'S STORY.

To-morrow's story will be "The Upper Berth," by Marion Crawford.

"Ask for his name, Jenkins."

"He has given it, madam."

"Well?" said Drusair.

"I scarcely like to tell you, madam."

"Come!" said Drusair.

"Drusair's Folly was the name he gave, madam."

"Give me the telephone, Jenkins, and you may leave the room."

"Drusair?" said London.

"Yes?" said Drusair.

"Drusair's Folly calls Drusair. Are you glad, my darling?"

"Napier," said Drusair, "will you never grow up?"

"But, Drusair, wasn't I actually Drusair's Folly? Can you deny it, angel?"

"Yes, I was foolish to marry you, Napier."

"Greatest American Heiress Weds Playboy Englishman Motor-racer." Remember the headlines, Drusair?"

"How we laughed! But I am glad I divorced you, Napier."

"Have you been in love since, my angel?"

"Oh, no. Having loved you, I know enough of love to last me a lifetime."

"Do you remember, Drusair, I told you we should remain lovers and not marry? Do you remember what marvellous lovers we were?"

"Until we married, Napier."

"Drusair, you were unfaithful to me."

"After such provocation, my darling, as no woman ever had before."

"The trouble was, Drusair, you were rich, and I was poor."

"You are spending a lot of money on this call, Napier."

"To say good-bye, Drusair. To say I love you, and to say 'good-bye'."

"Good-bye? Where are you going?"

"Listen, Drusair. With you in New York it is eight in the evening. Here in London it is one in the morning. This afternoon I had an accident racing at Brooklands."

"Napier! Are you hurt?"

"There's no pain now, Drusair, and I'm quite conscious. They are letting me say good-bye. I wanted to say good-bye, Drusair."

"Napier, Napier! Do you mean—?"

"Maybe I'll last another hour, Drusair, but not more. Good-bye, my darling. Drusair's Folly will take the echo of her voice with him."

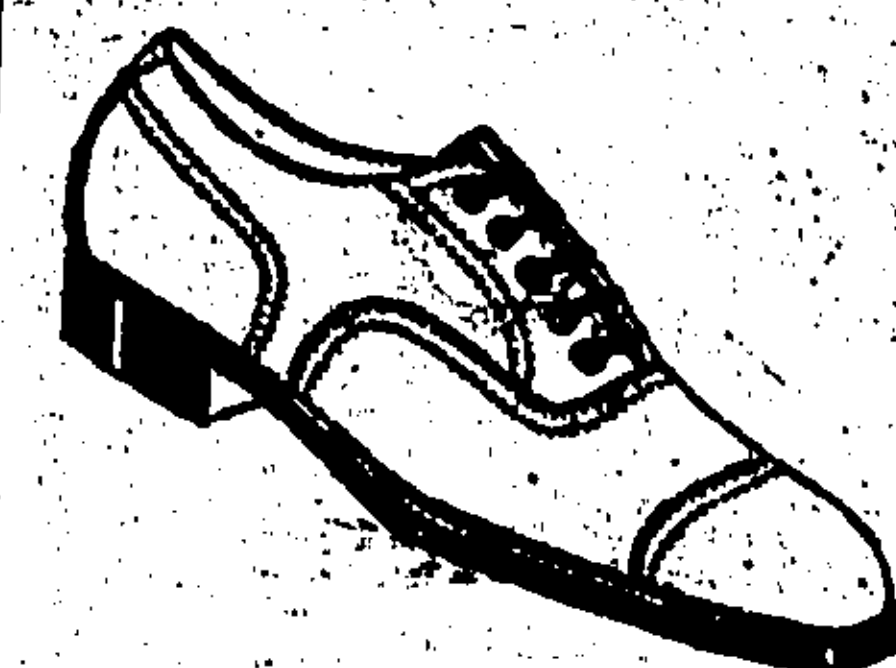

"Napier—listen, Napier!"

"There was no answer from the telephone. Drusair gave a sob. 'I've never loved any man but you, Napier.'"

Jenkins came in. Drusair turned away and lit a cigarette, and instantly her mouth was full of ashes.

"It's time you dressed, madam."

"I've changed my mind about that white dress, Jenkins. Give me the black velvet."

ATHLETIC WELL BEATEN BY THE NAVY

Disallowed Goal In Opening Minutes.

PENALTY MISSED

(By OUTSIDE LEFT).

A disallowed goal in favour of a penalty, which was missed, was responsible for the Athletic being badly beaten on the Club ground yesterday by the Navy, who scored on six occasions without reply.

The Navy were far superior to their opponents, whose forwards could do nothing right.

Warne, the Navy's outside right and Li Kwok-ki the Athletic's goal keeper were outstanding, while Langmead found his true form after a long absence, and was responsible for four of the goals.

Skinner, the Navy's left winger, and one of the finest the Colony has ever seen, made a welcome return and scored a very impressive goal after 10 minutes' play.

In the first minutes of the game the Athletic were all over the Navy, both Mak Shui-hon and Au Kim-fung going very near with first-time drives.

After five minutes of attacking Au Kim-fung neatly passed the ball to Khoo Fung-cheong who, cleverly side-stepped Purkins and made for goal. One of the backs tripped him up, but he recovered in time to net.

The referee disallowed the goal and awarded a penalty, and Ho Chor-yin struck the cross bar, for Newman to send the ball to the other end.

McPhee initiated a fine movement which resulted in Ho Chor-yin deserting LANGMEAD, who suddenly found himself in possession and made no mistake with a first-time drive.

Ten minutes later McPhee was again responsible, when he tapped the ball to SKINNER, who, taking his time, sent in a scorching drive from 25 yards to beat Li Kwok-ki.

Tang Kwong-sum tried to set his forwards in motion, but the inside men were too intent on walking the ball into the net, and were consistently robbed in the goalmouth.

Changing over with a two goal lead, LANGMEAD soon put the Navy further ahead when he cut through on his own and netted from point-blank range.

The restart saw a promising Athletic move, but Mak Shui-hon missed from close in to the astonishment of his other forwards. He had only Potts to beat.

McPHEE scored the Navy's fourth when he neatly robbed Leung Yuk-tong of the ball to net from close in.

For ten minutes the Navy kept the Athletic penned in their own goalmouth, but Li Kwok-ki lived up to his reputation and earned all-round applause with many brilliant saves.

The last minutes of the game saw the Athletic a well beaten team. LANGMEAD headed his third goal from a perfect centre by Warne.

Langmead again netted—again from Warne, who sent across a magnificent ground centre between Lo Hong-cheong and Lai Kwok-chiu, LANGMEAD meeting it first-time to score.

Royal Navy:—Potts; Buchanan and Newman; Purkins, Turner and Thomas; Warne, Langmead, McPhee and Skinner.

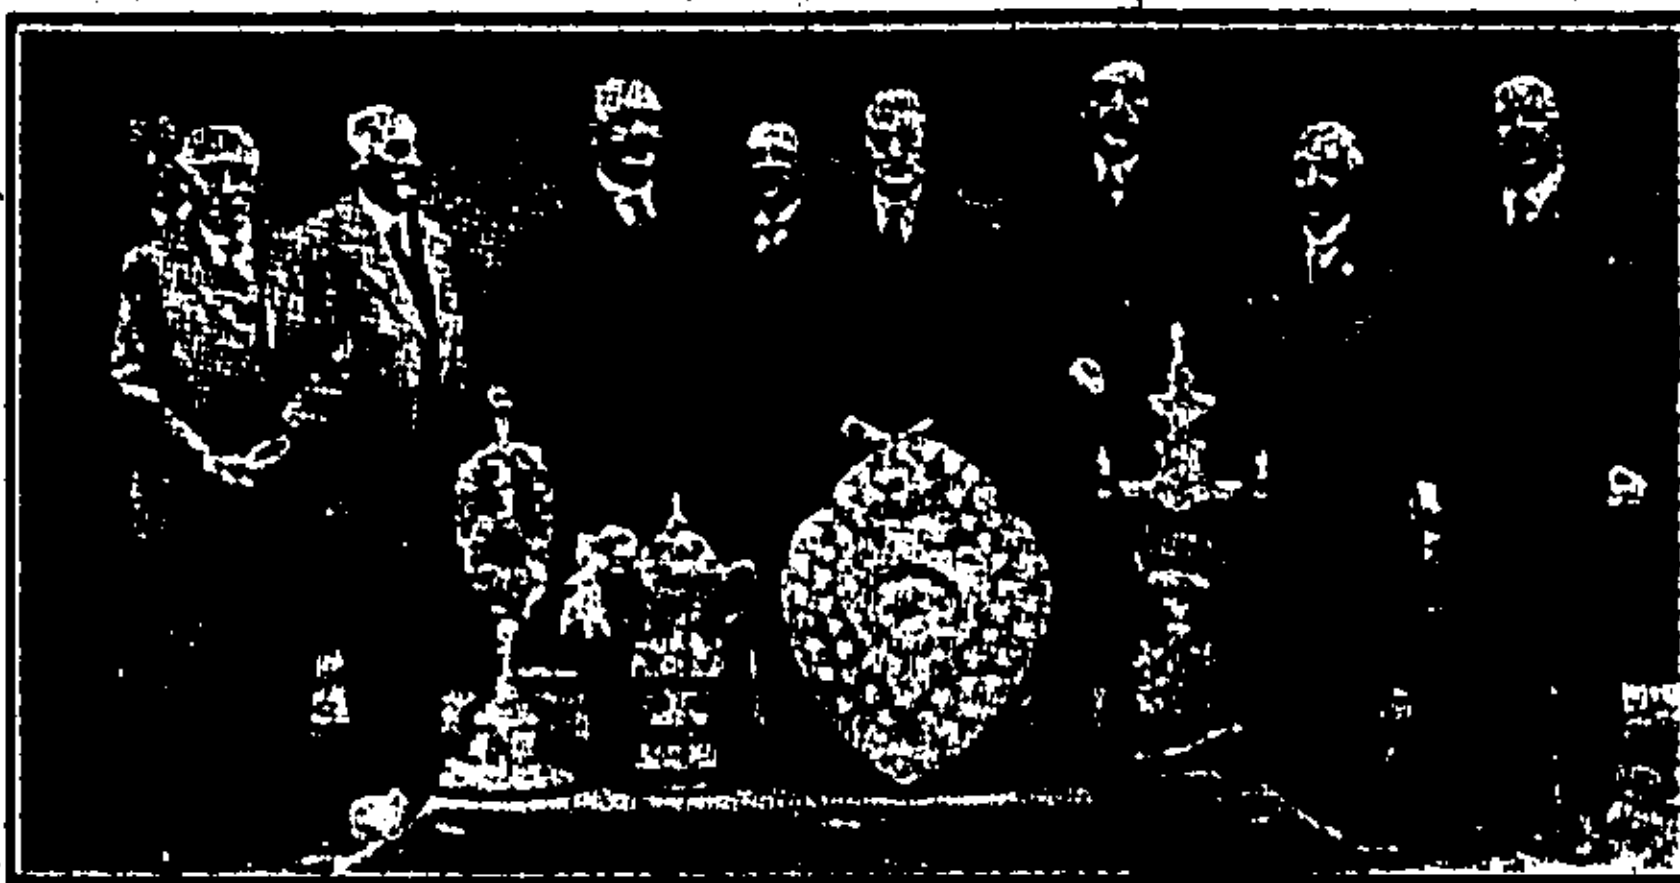

Chinese Athletic:—Li Kwok-ki; Leung Yuk-tong and Lo Hong-cheong; Ho Chor-yin, Lai Kwok-chiu and Lo Chi-ying; Tang Kwong-sum, Au Kim-fung, Khoo Fung-cheong, Mak Shui-hon and Cheong Hung-wing.

Referee—E. R. Anderson.

Recreio Win By 50 Shots

RIBEIRO'S RINK 28 SHOTS UP

Police Well Beaten.

I. R. C. LOSE FIRST GAME TO H. K. ELECTRIC

The 1933 Lawn Bowls League season opened on Saturday afternoon with four matches in the Junior Division. The season will be in full swing next week when a full programme of matches in both divisions will be played.

Convincing form was shown by the Club de Recreio, who trounced the Police R.C., newcomers to the Junior Division, by the large margin of 50 shots. F. V. Ribeiro's rink were 28 shots up.

The Indian R.C., the other newcomers to the League, were defeated by the Hong Kong Electric at Soekunpoo by 12 shots. They held their own until the tea interval when both teams were all square.

On the resumption, however, the team lost their earlier accuracy. The I.R.C. however, gave promise of better things, and by the end of the current season should have given a good account of themselves.

Thanks to a lead of 22 shots on A. MacFarlane's rink, the Yacht Club just managed to take two points from the Bowling Green, 1931 champions, by 9 shots. The Hon. Mr. W. T. Southorn played for the winners.

At Happy Valley, the Civil Service C.C. juniors commenced their season well by having the better of the Kowloon C.C. by 12 shots.

The following were the results.

EVERTON WIN CUP BEFORE 93,000

Dixie Dean And Right Wing Responsible

LANGFORD'S FINE DISPLAY

A CROWD of 93,000 saw Everton win the English Cup for the second time when they beat Manchester City by three goals to nil at Wembley Stadium to-day after leading by a goal to nil at the interval.

Stein, the outside left, Dixie Dean, the centre forward, and Dunn, the inside right, scored Everton's goals which gave them the custody of the Cup for the first time since the 1905-6 season when Everton beat Newcastle at Stamford Bridge.

His Majesty the King was not present at Wembley owing to the inclement weather, but he was represented by H.R.H. the Duke of York.

The Stadium rapidly reached its capacity crowd of 93,000. Scores of policemen lined the track and a similar number of cameramen fought for advantage points behind the goals. The band of the Scots Guards commenced community singing, many rattles joining in the choruses of popular airs.

The teams were given a great welcome when they "tried the feel of the pitch," which was excellent, but a trifle greasy as the result of slight rain. The sun, however, came out as the players went off the pitch, and transformed it into a patch of emerald green.

Manchester were unfortunate in not having Tilson "in." This caused a change in their line-up, Marshall going to inside right and Herd coming into centre forward.

Conditions were ideal when the Duke of York shook hands with the players prior to the start. Dixie Dean won the toss and took advantage of the sun.

Toseland made ground, but Sagar cleared with a long kick down the centre. A bout of scrappy play then ensued on the Everton right wing where Geldard and Dunn tried the strength of Bray and Dale.

Dunn McMullan set the City forwards again in motion, but Sagar cleared Cowan's long shot. The City were, however, back again, and Toseland forced a corner, but Sagar again cleared a low shot near the post.

Everton's method of attack was to get the ball in the air, but over-eagerness spoiled good work. Thrills abounded. Dean alternately shooting and heading just over, while Cresswell cleared a dangerous free kick from Brooks.

The continual right wing attack and Dean's persistence sealed Manchester's doom. Dean worried the defence who conceded a corner from which Geldard placed the ball right to DUNN, who got his head to the ball and sent it like a rocket into the back of the net. That was nine minutes before the final whistle.

Neither team extended themselves in the closing minutes, and Everton ran out winners by three clear goals.

Result—Everton 3 Manchester C. 0.

There were the usual enthusiastic scenes when the Duke of York presented the trophy to Dixie Dean and the medals to the Everton team.—Router.

Everton:—Sagar, Cook, Cresswell, Britton, Whitson, Thompson, Geldard, Dunn, Dean, Johnson, and Stein. Manchester:—Clay, Langford, Cam Dale, Bandy, Cowan, Bray, Toseland, Marshall, Herd, McMillan, and Brook.

Maybe there are some rougher acts ahead of me, but I know I'll never forget the friends and fans who greeted me at Wembley when I came back from the States.

I am positive that Fry knew nothing whatever about this game, and I soon told him so.

ALTHOUGH the whole of South China team are worthy of praise, their sensational comeback in local soccer history is due to the efforts of their four Canton players.

LI TIN-SANG, Tam Kong-pak, Fung King-cheong and Ip Pak-wa were again responsible for South China's victory.

BY defeating the Lincolns, South China have made almost certain of the Senior League Championship, thereby creating a magnificent record in the annals of the game in Hong Kong.

IT would be quite in order to state that without any one of the three forwards the two others would be hopeless. This was proved in the game against the Borders when Fung King-cheong failed to make the trip on account of business pressure.

THERE remains only one more fixture which may prove to be an obstacle in their race for the championship—the return encounter with the Athletic on the Club ground on Wednesday.

ALTHOUGH it is highly improbable the Athletic with a better ground and environment may pull off the impossible, and avenge their defeat at Caroline Hill last Wednesday.

SOCCER

WHY LINCOLNS LOST

South China's Canton Players.

WEDNESDAY'S BIG GAME

(By OUTSIDE LEFT.)

BAD leadership in the forward line and the starving of two excellent wingers in Baldry and Hocquard were partly responsible for the downfall of the Lincolns.

HIGGINS, who gave such an excellent display against the Club on Tuesday last, was disappointing, and was too fond of walking the ball into the South China goalmouth instead of attempting a shot from the penalty area.

THE well-known Chinese inside trio, Tam Kong-pak, Fung King-cheong and Ip Pak-wa were again responsible for South China's victory.

HISTORIC BILLIARDS

As soon as the great match started, the excitement was so great that crowds big enough to obstruct the traffic gathered outside the Egyptian Hall. It was like the Boat-race in its appeal to the public.

Leaders in sport and society crowded in at every session. I forget most of their names, but remember that Arthur Balfour came in more than once.

The actual play does not call for much description.

Over-Anxious.

From the first session I had the match in hand, and won eventually by some 3,600 points.

The fact of the matter was that Roberts was asked to do too much to give me 12,000 start in 24,000 spot-barred in two weeks' billiards.

Fry, his backer, thought that if Roberts extended himself to the full he could concede the start. So did many more people, but they made this mistake.

Roberts, great tennisman as he was, did not have to extend himself merely to beat me at the points. He had to over-extend himself even to try to do it.

This was fatal to his chance of victory.

He began every session with the disconcerting feeling that he was working "against the collar" all the time. This made him over-anxious, and kept him from playing his normal game.

Consequently, while I felt comfortable all the time, Roberts, although game as a pebble all through, was beating himself all the way.

It was the most notable game I ever played.

The like of it can never be seen again. We live in different times.

In these days one never hears of attempts to "get at" professional billiards players, but a mysterious individual waited for me and gave me to understand that it would be well worth my while to let Roberts win.

I am positive that Fry knew nothing whatever about this game, and I soon told him so.

ALTHOUGH it is highly improbable the Athletic with a better ground and environment may pull off the impossible, and avenge their defeat at Caroline Hill last Wednesday.

CATECHISM DAY OBSERVED

"At Home" At Wah Yan College.

BISHOP VALTORTA PRESENTS PRIZES.

Many visitors spent Saturday afternoon at the Great Hall of Wah Yan College, where the Chinese Catholic Young Men's Society held an "At Home."

Guests included His Lordship Bishop Valtorta, Fr. De Angelis, Fr. Gallagher, s.j., Fr. Burke, s.j., Fr. Ngai, the Mother Superior of the Italian Convent, the Mother Superior of the French Convent, the Mother Superior of the Precious Blood Convent, and many of the nuns from the various convents.

Mr. Shek Chung Sun, Chairman of the Society, welcomed his Lordship Bishop Valtorta.

Bishop Valtorta made a short speech, before distributing the prizes won by the pupils of the Chinese Catholic Schools in the Colony in the Catechism Competition.

He said: "This day is Catechism Day, and this is the first occasion on which it has been observed in Hong Kong. I hope and pray that it will be kept every year. I hope and pray that it will be observed every year for as long as the Catholic Church is in existence, and that is for as long as Hong Kong with stand."

I hope that this day will be kept more solemnly than any other prize-giving day. Catechism is the most important subject that is taught in schools. I hope that teachers and pupils will take a great interest in this subject and in this day.

When pupils are at school they are taught to fit themselves for a decent and comfortable life in this world. How much more important is Catechism than other subjects taught in schools, for it teaches us to fit ourselves for the next world.

Catechism teaches us to know, to serve, and to love God, therefore we must love the Catechism. Pope Pius XI, when himself a catechism teacher, used to prepare the small chimney sweeps of Milan. Let us learn from his example to teach the Catechism to poor children.

"I offer my congratulations and thanks to all teachers of the Catechism, and on behalf of Christ, himself, I dare thank them. They will gain great merit before God. I wish them also every good in this life."

Fr. De Angelis translated the Bishops speech into Cantonese, and himself spoke on behalf of the students.

Britain's Problem In India

sedition and revolution is due to the close liaison between the Army and the police. That will disappear when the two are under different authorities; the police in many provinces when the hostile Congress party comes into power can no longer be relied upon to maintain internal security. The Army remains; but having lost the co-operation of the police, it will have to be strengthened enormously—at heavy cost—and even so will have its efficiency as an instrument of internal security seriously reduced.

But the supporters of the White Paper will say: "We have provided against every emergency; look at the tremendous powers we give to the Governor-general and the Governors for maintenance of public security and of financial stability, protection of minorities and of the services, and prevention of commercial discrimination. They can, in the discharge of these special responsibilities refuse to act on the Ministers' advice, veto objectionable legislation, pass their own temporary ordinances subject to confirmation by Parliament, obtain necessary supply independent of the legislature, and in extreme cases even suspend the constitution. What more is needed?"

Power On Paper

The proposals contain all the above powers, and even more, on paper.

CANTON BOYCOTT CASE SETTLED.

The Sincere Company Vindicated.

It is learned from a reliable source that the resolution made by the People's Salvation Society presented to the Municipal Provincial Kuomintang, to forcibly close the Sincere Company's Canton store, who have refused to pay their fine of $200,000, has at last been settled. The Tangpu after full investigation into the facts have satisfied themselves that Sincere Company is completely blameless.

All available proof and facts substantiated the conviction generally held that the Sincere Company are not dealing Japanese goods.

The People's Salvation Society have admitted that during all their four previous raids only a very insignificant portion of such goods were found among the vast stock seized. Actually the exact amount of such goods are five kinds of fittings amounting to a sum of $31.19. During one of the raids a hundred jars of sulphuric acid were seized, but these on later investigation, proved to be of German origin, documentarily substantiated. The case was accordingly dismissed.

The Oriental Hotel, however, was on a slightly different basis, as the goods were actually found in their baggage room, and have since been proved to belong to guests, with their labels, names and room number affixed as in usual cases.

It is also admitted that the Hotel Management cannot very well search such luggage before its deposit in the baggage room nor have they the power to refuse to accept such deposits by their guests. Their charge could only amount to a case of minor negligence to report the presence of such goods of unknown origin to the Society for their investigation. For such oversight on the part of minor officials the fine is reduced by half.

Hence the Indian politicians have been quick to denounce them as inconsistent with real responsibility; while Sir Samuel Hoare tried to allay their fears by saying at the Conference that "they were rather ultimate controls that they hoped would never need to be exercised, for the greater reassurance of the world outside."

Anyone who, like the writer, has administered an Indian province in the past, or can visualise its working under the White Paper scheme, must realise, as Lord Zetland, a former Governor of Bengal, has pointed out in the "Times" of March 23, that in practice the powers will be futile, because the Governor-general and Governor, even if they have the necessary knowledge and will, will not be in a position to give effect to them. The reason is clear: the whole machinery of the administration has been taken away from them and placed in the hands of the very Ministers whose failure to act in an emergency—to what ever cause due—has driven the Governor to ignore them and take matters into his own hands. Is it likely that in such conditions the Governor or Governor-general, who are to fade away "after a period of transition," will be able to secure compliance with their orders by the services? The latter would not be human if they did not look to their new master, to the rising rather than the setting sun.

Take the not unlikely case of a fresh outbreak of Hindu-Muslim rioting in Cawnpore and Benares, where the memory of the wholesale murders and outrages of 1931 is still fresh, or of a renewal of his release of a Civil Disobedience Campaign in Bombay by Mr. Gandhi. In both Provinces the Ministry will be predominantly Hindu and with Congress leanings. Is it likely that the Minister in charge of the police and courts will, even under the Governor's express orders, take action against the Congress agitators which may lead to his defeat in the legislature and failure in the next election?

Without openly defying the Governor-general or Governor, he can thwart, obstruct or delay. Meantime the disorders develop into something like civil war; the civil agency having failed, the Governor has to appeal to the Viceroy for military intervention. The troops have to be used, at a disadvantage, for police work. Think how the world will ring with the cries of "Repression by military despotism," to visualise the Indian situations. It is difficult for the public here to visualise the Indian situations described. But assume that in the General Strike of 1926, the police courts and all the machinery of administration were under control of the very body that had promoted the strike—the T.U.C. Is it likely that the strike would have collapsed in ten days? Might it not have ended in revolution?

In India things would be worse for one could not rely on the wonderful rally of patriotic and courageous citizens to the support of law and order. The fact is that the Governor-general and Governors, often new to the country, completely isolated and entirely dependent on Indian Ministers, can, even if they are supermen, make no effective use of the safeguards which on paper look so imposing, for they will have lost control of the administrative machine.

The Remedy

What, then, is the remedy? In the Provinces, retain British control of the courts and the police till the Ministers prove that they can be trusted to work them efficiently and impartially. In the Central Government, retain British control for the reasons given in the Simon Report till the Indian Provinces and States have entered into an effective all-India Federation in which India will remain an integral part of the British Empire.

Let the Indian politicians prove they can govern a Province before we give them the opportunity to wreck an Empire.

And, above all, while trying to meet their reasonable aspirations, let us remember that there are two other and even greater interests to be considered—the welfare of the Indian masses, who hitherto have not received a thought in the various discussions, and the great financial and commercial interests of the British people in India; which have been so far subordinated to the bargaining of British and Indian politicians. Fortunately, the country is awakening to these two vital issues.

SENSATIONAL WIN ON SADKO

MR. FUNG PAYS $122 ON ORLANDO

MR. Gilbert Harriman Saturday recorded his first win at the Valley this season when he brought off a sensational triumph on Sadko. Only 38 backed him for a win, and as a result there was a $199.10 dividend—the highest of the year—and $62.60 for a place.
This was not the only three-figure dividend of the afternoon.
Mr. Y. T. Fung, in bringing Orlando home for his first win of the se-son, returned a dividend of $122.50.
Lady Peel recorded another triumph at the Valley when Mr. D.
Black rode Lucy Glitters to victory in the Charters Towers Handicap.
This was Mr. Black's second win on this pony.
Mr. Johnny Heard, though not achieving all that was expected of him, again proved to be the leading jockey, securing three wins and two thirds in ten starts. He now leads Mr. "Leo" Frost, who failed to register a win yesterday, by three winners.
A protest was lodged in the last race of the day against Mr.
Proulx on Hey Tor for cutting across the field in the home straight, but the Stewards over-ruled it.

STRATOPLANES FOR NEAR FUTURE.

Prof. Piccard Visualises
500 M.P.H. Machine.

California. Professor August Piccard, explorer of the stratosphere ten miles above the earth, says he is convinced he can build an aeroplane capable of flying through the stratosphere at 500 miles an hour. "I believe I could do so within a year and a half," he said. "And in my opinion the stratosphere plane is a thing of the not very distant future."—Reuter.

PREHISTORIC ROARS FOR CHICAGO.

Chicago, Illinois. If you hear some strange noises at the Chicago World Fair in June, don't be alarmed. It will be nothing more than the roar of prehistoric animals, which the Fair officials plan for the amusement of their guests. The roars are to be produced by mechanical means in such things as dinosaurs, platybelodons, ground sloths, in an exhibit of pre-historical animals.—Reuter.

THE UNIQUE ASS.
